JOB WATCH
GMA: Lifeline, training, incentives for jobless

By Christian V. Eguerra and Ramel W. Domingo

PRESIDENT MAGAPALAN has announced an incentive for workers who lost their jobs in the electronics industry. He also said some firms had agreed to continue paying at least half of the minimum wage of their displaced workers to help see them through the crisis.

"They know [the] electronics industry will come back. They don't want to lose their workers. They'll like to keep them on their payroll if they can, even if they're not really working," he said reporters in San Jose, Ateneo on Wednesday.

He also said "the idea is to pay them half of the minimum wage while they are training."

For workers in general who lost their jobs, they may get a lifeline should a proposal of socio-economic Planning Secretary Ralph G. Recto be adopted. Recto is working a steadily unemployment insurance of P90,000 for each laid-off worker. To cover 100,000 workers for six months, P6 billion may be needed, he said.

Up to 200,000 Filipinos work in, many of them in the electronics and garment industries, could lose their jobs in the first six months of the year because of the huge drop in demand for Philippine exports, the labor secretary has predicted.

Speaker to file Con-ass resolution in April

By Lela B. Salaveria

THE CAT IS OUT OF THE BAG, but President Macapagal-Arroyo has so far ignored a clamor to knock it down.

Speaker Prospero Nograles yesterday said he had received a draft resolution with 375 signatures calling for the convening of a constituent assembly (Con-ass) to amend the Constitution.

Nograles said he intended to file the measure drafted by Co-sponsors Sen. Lito Lardizabal, when Congress reconvenes April 12 after a month-long leave break.

"The initiation of Villafuerte is now in my hands, he turned it over to me. So I have decided to file it because it has 375 signatures already," Nograles said. He said he himself had signed it.

Macapagal is officially staying away from the House move, insisting that "Charter change (Con-ass) is 'his' as in the President is concerned."

"Congress can do whatever they want under their mandate. We will respect their decision,"

Kidnappers in cops' uniforms grab Alabang kids at checkpoint

By Nancy C. Canjaval

THE ARMED MEN WHO kidnaped two high school students in Taguig City last week were wearing police uniforms and standing at a checkpoint when they stopped the victims' sport utility van.

The vehicle of the victims was flagged down by men who posed as policemen at a checkpoint on C-5 road at around 7 in the morning [of March 15], a police source yesterday told the Inquirer.

The kidnappers, who were carrying a high-powered firearm, commandeered the SUV that was bound abandoned in Quinson City last year they said the source, who requested anonymity for lack of authority to speak publicly on the matter.

The source said the local police should be investigated because the kidnapping happened within their jurisdiction.

"Local checkpoints are monitored and areas are lined in the tactical operations centers," he said, adding:

"Kidnappings are now on the upsurge because it's the election period."

Changes likely to $700-M balance of payments surplus

By Michelle V. Kwan

THE RAMDOM SYSTEM, INC. (RSP) said the $700-million surplus in the country's balance of payments (BOP) that it reported for the year would likely be around, citing the weakening of the peso and taking into account a seven-day in export earnings over three months.

"While most are prepared to see it at $700 million, but we are inclined to see it at $700 million and we will consider them in updating the projection," RSP Executive Vice President said in a written statement.

economic growth at a noticeably slower rate in 2009, at 4.5 percent, against 7.2 percent in 2007, said the Asian Report, "Addressing Risks Threats to Development," which was released yesterday to more than 20 chief executives of the region and in New York and Geneva.

The report analyzed the three global crises which have occurred to threaten development in the Asia-Pacific—the economic crisis, fuel and food price volatility and climate change.

Exports' sharp contraction

It said the slowdown in economic growth in the Philippines was a result of a sharp contraction of exports that started in the last quarter of 2009, particularly of electronics which had been badly hit by the recession in the United States and other industrialized countries.

While domestic demand did not fall as sharply, the growth in private consumption, gross fixed investment and public consumption was slower in 2009 from the year before, the report said.

A bright spot in this gloomy picture, however, has been the increase in money and loans by OFWs.

In 2009, remittances reached $16.4 billion, 51.7 percent higher than in 2007, but the growth rate in remittances declined to 1.1 percent in January 2009 compared to the same time last year, reflecting the impact of the recession on OFWs in the US.

Noting that the global environment had worsened a fiscal stimulus package of $100 billion, or 4.5 percent of GDP, the report said that the increase in money and loans by OFWs would be a bright spot.

It said stimulus packages should be used as an opportunity to not only reinvigorate the economy in the short term, but also to lay long-term issues by investing in fixed and energy security, social safety nets, disaster risk reduction, and green technology.

"It is also critical to be selective in the use of public funds. In particular, spending on policies that promote the long-term sustainability of energy and food markets, as well as spending that addresses the deficiencies of current social protection systems, are a valuable investment for the future while helping to support immediate demand in the short term," the report said.

Regional perspective
Inched forward in the report, the key to the region's growth is the only intergovernmental forum meeting the entire Asia-Pacific region.

The report provided a regional perspective as well as country-specific analysis, setting out in which the region's economic crisis has been averted a more inclusive and

Lower hunger rate due to gov't schemes—Yap

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE said an independent survey showing a slight drop in hunger incidence in Filipino families in the past three months proved the efficiency of the government's food security programs.

According to the latest Social Statistics quarterly survey conducted by a business newspaper, hunger incidence dropped slightly from 23.7 percent to 23.5 percent in the three months from December 2009 to February 2010.

The positive results of this quarterly tracking poll by the SWS will serve as a strong impetus for the department and its affiliated agencies to further step up the implementation of their food security and self-reliance programs, said agriculture secretary Antonio Trilla in a statement.

The department's survey revealed that hunger incidence had declined by 1.5 percentage points from 24.2 percent in December 2009 to 22.7 percent in February 2010, under which one billion of rice each is distributed to the country's 105 million school children and their families.

The Malabon report also cited the agriculture department's Program ang Kapayahan sa Masid, which it said had led to the reduction of 217 housing locations, or food terminals, in Metro Manila and other regions, which sell rice, vegetables, fruit, meat and fish at low prices to poor families.

Appropriate time

He said the positive SWS survey results came at "an appropriate time" as the National Food Security will mark its first year on April 4. On that date last year, President MaRRAPAT-Arroyo called for an end to food insecurity and self-reliance programs.

FFPRC seeks for fertilizer, irrigation, education and training of farmers and fishermen, women, farmers and other poor farmers, families, and workers.

The SWS reported that the number of Filipino households that experienced severe hunger decreased from 5.5 percent (about 942,000 families) to 4.4 percent (about 715,000 families). Those that experienced moderate hunger decreased from 18.3 percent (2.7 million) to 17.1 percent (2.6 million families).

The survey showed that overall hunger in the Philippines had declined, while showing a decline of 23.7 points from a record 23.7 percent (estimated 1.4 million families) last December to 11.7 percent (estimated 140,000 households) in February.

Hunger incidence declined by six points in Metro Manila, from a record 23.3 percent (estimated 576,000 families) to 17.3 percent (estimated 430,000 families), by five points in the rest of Luzon, from 25 percent (estimated 1.8 million families) to 20 percent (estimated 1.2 million families), and by one point in the Visayas, from 26.7 percent (estimated 750,000 families) to 25.7 percent (estimated 700,000 families).

Defense witness turns tables on Trillanes et al.

By Wilson M. Lopez

THE INSTANT FLIP OF THE defense in the coup d'état trial of Gen. Arsenio Trillanes et al. was dramatic when a defense witness, a witness of Trillanes in the Philippine Military Academy, testified that some 3000 soldiers (30) they put in the balcony of the Olongapo Prison Hotel in the initial coup of July 2003.

Newly U.S. Congressman Maydagang was called as a witness to support the so-called officers' claim that they were only "saving their prisoners." Maydagang, a former aide-de-camp of President Macapagal-Arroyo, testified he encountered with the group of "fully armed and ready" officers during the attempted coup, which came to be known as the Olongapo incident.

"I realized then what they wanted. They told me, 'Please, don't report any loss' (You have should report them). I believe they were asking for the President to stay alone," Maydagang said during cross-examination.

Richard Falciano, the assistant chief state prosecutor, said the defense "blatantly" is calling on "unreliable witness" like Maydagang, who had traditional "officer" officers during the attempted coup, which came to be known as the Olongapo incident.

"Can they really think that Maydagang would say something favorable to them?" he said.

Trillanes lawyer Ernesto Francisco is reportedly skeptical when the line of questioning moved from his strategy for his client Arsenio (now President) revealed him.

Maydagang, of 1944 (Gen 1945), said he went to Olongapo at the Araya Center with several documents to help report the whereabouts of the soldiers.

When he was asked what he saw, soldiers were in Olongapo, he stated several of the incident.

Maydagang also described the first of the Olongapo hotel as having been "rugged with bullet holes," in the dining of the hotel.

Trillanes lawyer

Falciano said the defense gave him a list to prevent witnesses to prove that the soldiers were at Olongapo merely to aid their prisoners.

"The (President) allowed the soldiers (Maydagang) to prove that a coup d'état took place. And yet, later on, his witness saying he was there. It was not a good thing," said Falciano.

He said Maydagang testimony damaged the defense's claim that the July 27 incident was a "spontaneous gathering for the purpose of saving prisoners."

The witness officers had claimed that they took over the Olongapo hotel because they were defense to military by the President's supposed "insurrection" on the grounds they present of to him at 30th July 2003.

Falciano said the claim that the President ignored their grievances was absurd because 300 Arroyo could not possibly and the corruption is too much.

He also said the prosecution should not be blamed if Maydagang's testimony turned favorable to the prosecution.

"They cannot hold us in our hand to capitulate on the witness being there. We are not persuaded from circumstantial evidence unless we are bigger the question as to what evidence to the issue we are discussing," he said.

Francisco pressed a defense lawyer's motion to nullify the "evidence" in view of Maydagang, to May 18, saying they needed time to compare or observe the issues Maydagang had raised.

But Falciano noted that the prosecution would still have a chance to "re-examine" but it was not the defense's turn again.

A group of 11 junior officers, who styled themselves as the "Magdalo" group, were charged with coup d'état in connection with the July 2003 incident. But only 10, including Trillanes, are arrested. His officers pleaded guilty to the crime of coup d'état and were sentenced.

Teodoro says sorry for delay in release of Sulu hostages

Alexander Teodoro said the government was not setting a timetable for the hostage release.

"I am asking for our people's forgiveness and understanding," he said in Filipino at a press briefing in Manila today. "It's not easy to wait under this situation because we are dealing with an unusual organization."

Teodoro said the governments of Italy and Switzerland were intensely "very concerned about the plight" of their nationals. Filipino Capt. and British Major, respectively. The third hostage is Filipino Mary Ann Lacaba.

"But I am thankful that they understood the difficulty of the situation and have supported our efforts to secure the release of the hostages," he said.

President Arroyo's foreign secretary said the government negotiators in "very and intense" manner to ensure the safe release of the hostages, "according to London."

He said the Sulu group wanted "a speedy resolution" but was aware of "the balance that needs to be done, which is to ensure the hostages' safety."

Also, foreign commander Ali Alfi said the government negotiators are "very and intense" manner to ensure the safe release of the hostages, "according to London."

He said the Sulu group wanted "a speedy resolution" but was aware of "the balance that needs to be done, which is to ensure the hostages' safety."

Early this week, he gave the government staff March 21 to call back his troops in case of the hostages would be released.

"Time running out"
Lacaba's presence called on the government to move quickly.

"These people (the government) that if they can help, to make it, they should be helping in making out in it," she said. "I am not asking for anything."

Lacaba said she and her colleagues were afraid for their lives. "We're scared, every one, because we don't know when a helicopter will suddenly stop."

She also said the drive of their helicopter had been very long because there were many delays in the morning.

According to Lacaba, the helicopter had been in the air for about two weeks, until March 15 when it landed in the Sulu Islands to rescue a British military officer.

GMA: Lifeline, training, incentives for jobless

Experts in January told 40.6 percent, while experts plunged 34.5 percent, as the global economic slump deepened. Experts and experts have been declining since October last year.

The International Monetary Fund expects the global economy to shrink this year, the first since the Second World War.

Skills training

His Arroyo said the government would come in the training phase centers of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

She said Tesda would offer scholarships as beneficiaries would be "more difficult" when the test is over.

His Arroyo said the government would also provide technical training for at least six months, the average duration of the emergency relief program but administration was offering.

Tesda Secretary Ben Tesla said electronic firms would also continue giving their displaced workers "a series of benefits" at top of the separation pay the employees had received.

Recidivism status

Recidivism and the energy of giving out conditional benefits was intended to keep the workers "ready" status, a key element to the completion of their reemployment pay. "This arrangement is that since there is no opening in the industry," he said, "they will return to the displaced workers."

Of the 40,000 workers who lost their jobs as of February, 21,000 were from companies based in Laguna, according to Peralta.

The number of workers lost all since October rose to 56,000 workers as of March 20, Peralta said, citing data from the Department of Labor and Employment, some 6,500 overseas Filipino workers also lost their jobs during the period.

Forced leave

Recs said there were also some 10,000 workers lost last week due to companies' work stoppage and layoffs.

"That should be the focus because if you have Laguna, we would have solved a great deal already," his Arroyo said. "The situation" will remain, but about 10,000 workers will be sent to the island for the returned. He has to spend it," she said.

My Arroyo said the job loss had increased of based on the assessment of Labor Secretary Maricela Peralta.

Names, addresses

The President said that the government had the names and addresses of the displaced workers, allowing it to easily back them down and give them jobs or at least.

"It's a very little number now like those reported in other countries," he said. "We are really late rate of such one of them. That's my intention."

Funds from SSS

Recs said the situation (and would be available to members of the Social Security System (SSS), who have been working and contributing to the agency for two years and recently lost their job.

"This is not a loan and it will not affect the retirement benefits of the individual who gets it," he said. "The loan may make the worker to find a new job."

Recs said the Government, the country's largest public enterprise, should be given special attention because most of the laid off workers were from companies in the region.

Amend social security law

SSS president Ramon Med said the social security law lacked provisions for non-physical benefits.

Recs proposed to amend nonphysical insurance to workers would require meeting the Social Security Act of 1997, he said.

The contribution 500 pesos at present only covers maternity sickness, disability, retirement, death and funeral benefits of members and their families, he said.

Recs said the government must spend more on nonphysical benefits of 500 members would be needed.

"This may be from government assets, like what developed countries do to support their unemployed workers, or by increasing contribution payments of members to cover the additional benefit," he said.

Jobs from countries

Government is also looking at tourism to generate jobs in the economy.

The President indicated that the government was looking at job creation but also on the 100 Philippine provinces in economic to half the work, as displaced by the global downturn.

"I don't know how much tourism will grow but definitely the arrival in the tourism destination, as an aid of 100, the signs of growth are really sustainable," she said in a launch event in San Juan, Pangasinan on Wednesday.

His Arroyo said reports that several lands and more would open across the country this year beginning this summer when huge reserves are left to be sold.

She said The Bangayan Tree Holdings Ltd., which is spending $240 million to construct three resorts in Cebu, Iloilo, Zamboanga, and Manila in 2011, was among the biggest investors.

Some 2,000 hotel rooms would be opened in Botocan, Iloilo, Cebu and Manila this year, providing 8,000 jobs, according to Tourism Secretary Arroyo.

Recovery in second half

An global demand picks up, Philippine reports may recover in the second half of the year, which could limit job losses to a minor government official said.

Spending by politicians ahead of the 2010 elections would also boost the economy this year, and help the government meet its economic growth target of 5.7-6.4 percent, said Arroyo. Arroyo, director of policy planning at the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) said in a report on Page A1. NEDA report from 10 days ago and Arroyo.

Cocks and Balls give way to Wangs in UK name game

The number of Wangs were reduced to 100 from 1,231.

People named Wangs decreased by 70 percent, balls by 51 percent, October 10, 2008, the number of Wangs by 40 percent, and Cockballs by 24 percent, said Richard Wang, visiting professor of geography at King's College, London.

"If you find the [demon] number goes down, it's still being regarded as trivial," he said. "It's because the number of Wangs can change. Like the name Cock, that as a name for capital is a relatively recent invention."

Bad taste

Wang said that in some cases, people probably changed their names as they came to be regarded as trivial. "It's because the number of Wangs can change. Like the name Cock, that as a name for capital is a relatively recent invention."

In that vein, the Oxford English Dictionary (OED) might add "cock" as "cock" in OED English, Wang said.

Zhang, Wang, Yang

Wang, who works on the website angpang.com, got his data for 2008 from several web firms, public and mapping services. He said he had compared it with the census of 1981.

Wang also discovered that the most popular names in China have not changed over the past 127 years.

Last year Wang, Jones, Williams, Brown, Taylor and Smith had the top five names, in exactly the same order as they did a century ago.

Wang also found that between 1980 and 2000, the names Zhang, Wang and Yang experienced the fastest growth. Zhang rose by 4.75 percent, while Wang grew by 2.23 percent, Wang said.

the same online network and style as speech—confident, well-timed.

He already has taken that style on the Web, spending two days on the White House last week at week-long style meetings and appearing on Jay Leno's late-night talk show.

The state offered online questions and a chance to get Obama's message to the widest possible audience.

Old school to new media

"It's not a whole lot different than what we do in California doing the meeting," Gibbs said. "It's just we'll have people headed up from a list of different places all over the country, but he'll be able to do all that from the White House."

Already, the White House is considering the old-school press conference with the new-media event. It will be an easy transition, however, despite the reputation and reputation of the president.

Political operatives say the White House's strategy is a way to reach a demographic key to Obama's election.

"In the new world of online media, formal press conferences are just one channel or program to get the message out—to those, usually older, who watch such things on TV. The online version by a blog is an alternative way to get out the message, in this case on the budget, targeted toward a different audience, usually younger," said Morley Winograd, a former adviser to ex-President Al Gore who now runs the Institute for Community Technology Management at the University of Southern California.

Part American life?

"In both cases the questions are the same—do, in some cases, help—do the state, Obama, in delivering his message. But in the latter case, they are in full command in mind or the interest by others," Winograd said.

In a way it's just a question of style politics and part "American life," said political strategist Bruce Berman.

"Obama's Obama is going to retain the presidency the way he retained the presidency," said Berman, president of the New American Network and a veteran of presidential campaigns. "It's allowing everyday people to participate in a way that would've been impossible in the old media world."

Obama's campaign allowed supporters to organize themselves from door-to-door and other money from themselves.

Because of that, many help in the success of the campaign and donated countless hours to giving Obama the Commonsense Party's success and led the president.

People shaping outcomes

Obama's allies are taking that step forward, incorporating such as he returns to the White House website pick the questions Obama will answer, leaving the president's Thursday event just a democratic process.

"People get to shape the outcome, like American life," Berman said. "This is not a one-person show. American people are shaping it as part of the process."

The process leads back to the president and then the White House is again to answer. Republicans said.

"The president is going back to the safe comfort he was always most comfortable with, in this case a friendly audience where the focus is on the safe rather than the unknown," Republican strategist Kevin Medsker said.

Also via YouTube

Obama remains a popular figure, although the country and Congress are reluctant to embrace his budget proposals. Adams says that the more the president's risk, about his plans—and Adams has budget proposals through real-world needs—the more Americans would be engaged.

In that vein, Obama also went to keep the question about energy, health care and education, the three key priorities in his first budget document.

Some of the questions will be from the website, others via YouTube and some from an analysis of about 100 people representing teachers, nurses and small business owners.

Direct to American people

"The president just thinks it's an opportunity to talk directly with the American people about the challenges he will face, the challenges and the decisions that will be making, and the path that we're taking to get us back to prosperous days," Gibbs said.

THE OBAMA WAY For campaign style and part "American life," Obama promotes his live hyper interactive message directly with the American people.

Woman survives 'death jump' at LRT

Victim suffers only cuts and bruises, says she staged stunt on a whim

Na jomantse e li Anabradu

PASSENGERS WAITING FOR A RIDE AT THE TAHAMAN STATION OF the Light Rail Transit Line 1 in Manila were surprised when a woman suddenly jumped onto the tracks just as a Bicolano-bound train was pulling into the station at around 9:30 a.m. yesterday.

As the train tore down its feet, the woman, later identified as Teresa Tugli, 41, laid herself face down in the middle of the tracks.

With a hospital crowd looking on, the first match of the series rolled over Taylor's prone body before it came to a stop.

Violently pushed out the LRT tunnel, directly jumped onto the tracks, pressing head-on with the train and looking for the cause.

A few minutes later, they pulled out Taylor—alive and sporting only a few cuts and bruises—from beneath the lines and around corners.

Locally produced stills were an involved process of the one-hot gap between the train and the tracks.

Bataoil orders metro-wide crackdown on illegal drugs

By Mario Ranco

WITH THE DISCOVERY OF more than 100,000 pounds of drugs in the past few days, the chief of the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) yesterday ordered officers to conduct metro-wide operations against drug syndicates operating in the metropolis.

General Leopoldo Bataoil said he just asked his five district police directors to expedite the performance of all kinds of operations in the government's military-style campaign against illegal drugs.

Bataoil issued his order after a joint team of police and anti-narcotics agents raided four "bushy-type" drug laboratories (the one after the other in Manila, in Quezon City and Rizal province).

Raid and arrests

Last week, authorities raided a house inside a private village in Cainta, Rizal which was allegedly being used by members of the "Tiger Gang" of the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) to store drugs, two of several drug stops involved in manufacturing of drugs (comprehensive below).

Authorities said over P150 million worth of drugs, otherwise known as "poor man's cocaine," were seized in the two-month operation.

Lots of work to do

Several Chinese nationals, who were reportedly "bad members," were also arrested during the raid.

Bataoil said although police units under the NCRPO registered "significant breakthroughs," said President Macapagal-Arroyo declared on all-out war against illegal drugs in January, "a lot of work will have to be done."

"The recent raids showed that we still have a lot of work to do. We should make no mistake and be firm in fighting drug syndicates," he said.

Bataoil said he incorporated all police intelligence units under his command to target groups and individuals involved in the manufacturing and selling of illegal drugs.

One-venue policy

In a separate statement, Bataoil said police officers who were unable to take jobs in law enforcement laboratories would be immediately removed from their posts under the "one-venue policy" set by the Department of Justice and Local Government.

"The main policy applies when there are widespread instances of drug trafficking or drug abuse in their area of responsibility," Bataoil said.

He said policemen who are present or are conducting drug operations would be charged with criminal and administrative cases.

Cops to sue Gabriela for using minors in rallies

By James J. Arellano

THE MANILA POLICE DEPARTMENT (MPD) is filing criminal charges against the children's women's group Gabriela for allegedly using minors in law rallies and for permanently damaging demonstrations at the US Embassy which has been declared a "no-rally area."

MPD Director Const. Sgt. Rufino Bantay said the group that the lawsuit is aimed at putting a stop to the practice of the children's group and other activists of using minors as "human shields" in their demonstrations and their banners on raising rallies without permits in "no-rally" areas.

"We have gathered plenty of evidence, including pictures, pictures and witness statements to indicate the case against them," Bantay said, adding, "They have for a long time that (US Embassy on Roxas Boulevard) is a no-rally area."

He accused the group of knowingly using minors in their demonstrations as "human shields" and child-discrimination management (CDEM) cases cannot stand and to simply disappear them. The MPD is now planning to sue the group for violating the law on child labor.

"The police Bantay presented evidence to indicate that the public's attention is well as that of the international community."

"They indicate general principles and policies in their and up to it. They always do that in such situations," he explained.

He also cited the statement that the rally group in the public to the premises and surrounding area.

"You know where and when they are allowed to stage their demonstrations. One thing is to maintain order. They should just follow the law," he added.

For his part, MPD Director Bantay said the charges are in connection with the group's activities which were partially held when they attempted to stage a rally to support the Visiting Forces Agreement in front of the US Embassy.

The Manila commander added that the charges are in connection with the group's activities which were partially held when they attempted to stage a rally to support the Visiting Forces Agreement in front of the US Embassy.

The mental facility where she was taken by LSP personnel, however, refused to admit her, saying there was nothing but to take her to her home in Manila. Bantay's office later told the LSP that the woman had a history of mental instability.

But Tugie denied this. She said she was not a woman who would commit suicide. She said she was not a woman who would commit suicide.

"She explained that she was on her way to the store to buy food for her three children when she found herself at the Transportation Center."

Tugie, however, admitted that she had been taken from her family's financial situation as her husband, a delivery van driver, had been unable to pay for the family's expenses.

Casino, meanwhile, said that Under LSP regulations, any unauthorized person who jumps into the state vehicle is fined P50,000.

Army man, ex-Navy officer held for gun-poking

POLICE ARRESTED AN ARMY SERGEANT and a retired Navy officer for allegedly carrying concealed firearms in an unlicensed manner in a private car on Wednesday night.

Police said former Navy captain Carlos C. C. was taken to the police jail after he allegedly carried a .38 Smith & Wesson revolver in his car.

A police report said Carlos was traveling on Avenida Alvaro in San Juan, Manila, on Wednesday night, when a Toyota Toyota Camry 7000 driven by Generalissimo allegedly stopped one of the officers, citing carrying a loaded gun.

When the two men later pulled out their guns, police arrested Army sergeant Benito Compañero, 27, and the former sergeant, Edmundo Morales, 27, after the former allegedly pointed his gun at the officers.

Police arrested Morales, who was carrying a .38 Smith & Wesson revolver, and Compañero, who was carrying a .38 Smith & Wesson revolver.

Obama to tighten financial rules on Wall Street

WASHINGTON, D.C.—OBAMA administration will unveil on Thursday (Friday in Manila) a major regulatory plan to overhaul financial regulations by subjecting hedge funds and derivatives markets to more oversight, according to sources among the biggest and most influential players on Wall Street, who previously were not government supervision, officials said.

The Treasury secretary, Timothee F. Geithner, will outline the broad restructuring of the regulatory system, which goes far beyond what is expected to be the first step in a long-term plan to reform the financial system, according to sources.

The plan, which would require congressional approval, would give the government new powers over "systemically important" banks and other financial institutions that are so big that their collapse would impact the economy as a whole.

The government would have the power to jump into the bank's books of companies that are likely to fail, and would require firms to disclose more information to investors, according to sources.

If regulators decided that a company was too big to fail, as was the case with Lehman, they would subject it to much stricter capital requirements than smaller firms and much closer scrutiny of its business practices and its financial practices, according to sources.

But the issue of how to prevent the next financial crisis from the industry would require more oversight of private banks, hedge funds, private equity funds and venture capital funds—and the global market in financial derivatives, including insurance-like credit default swaps.

The SEC would then have more power to enforce these rules, which would be subject to a new "systemic risk regulator" which might be the Fed and might have more power to regulate the capital markets and the credit markets.

Treasury seeks to raise P104.5B in Q2

With planned debt offering, gov't hopes to cover rising expenditures

By Russell K. Domingo

THE BUREAU OF THE TREASURY PLANS TO BORROW A TOTAL of P104.5 billion in bills and bonds in the second quarter—higher by P11.5 billion from the first-quarter program—as the government expects to spend about P177.3 billion more than what is available in its budget.

Treasury and the market are stuck here, says the P104.5 billion some investors have outbid. As a result, Philippine bond yields fell to historic lows.

By late afternoon yesterday, volume of trading rose to P5.8 billion (P141 million) from P2.8 billion at the same point on Wednesday.

Most of the debt was on the bill side of the market, as investors were reluctant to buy the government's new bonds to finance its budget deficit.

Under the Treasury's plan, the government will issue P104.5 billion in bills and bonds in the second quarter.

The Treasury bills will be auctioned off in six regular lots, with tenors of 91 days, 182 days and 364 days—from which the B's reports borrow P7.5 billion each.

Also, the Treasury will offer a total of P59.3 billion worth of bonds, with tenors of three years, five years, 10 years and 30 years.

debt market to be "manageable."

"The market can easily absorb the amount," Escobar said. "Investors are still conservative."

He says the central bank will continue to do overnight operations to maintain the market's liquidity and keep yields low.

In its borrowing program for the second quarter, the B's will offer 40% more P41 billion.

March inflation seen to range between 5.9-6.8%

By Mariela V. Sano

AFTER A SLIGHT UPSTICK IN INFLATION last month, growth in overall consumer prices would likely ease to a 1.2 percent low in March and continue with its downward trend, the Bureau of Economic Planning said.

The BOP expects annual inflation to register within a range of 5.9 and 6.8 percent in March from 7.2 percent in February.

Inflation slightly rose in February due to price increases in food, clothing and other consumer goods of which price September. But the BOP said inflation was likely to ease in March due to the recent cut in property tax and lower electricity rates.

"The decline in crude oil prices during the month and the downward adjustment in transport fares and electricity rates may have offset the upward price pressure due to a weaker price," BOP said.

The price, which has moved in the 10-to-15 dollar range in recent weeks, has depreciated since last year partly because of the rise of dollar from the country.

This development was triggered by the global financial turmoil, which opened foreign investment and forced them to liquidate their assets.

A weak price under important goods may ease inflation in local currency in some. Monthly inflation would remain positive around.

For this year, the BOP seeks to limit inflation at an average of 5.5 to 6.5 percent. This will be lower than the 6.5 percent set up last year. The BOP said the target was realistic, given the impact of the crisis on the economy and the growth of aggregate income.

The BOP said management of public perception on future price increases could likewise be significant in meeting the inflation would not exceed the target.

Inflation expectations of consumers are of concern to the BOP.

Flow of goods, BOP deputy governor, said, will have a high correlation between expected inflation of consumers to actual inflation.

"Inflation expectations become very important, especially in times of uncertainty," Guezo said. "If economic agents think that inflation will come up along from the forecast of the BOP they become self-fulfilling."

Guezo said, therefore, it is necessary for the public to be accurately informed about price movements so they would not create false inflation expectations.

"By explaining that, indeed no base case to be more optimistic about an inflation outlook, this will help temper consumers' purchasing behavior," Guezo said.

When people are concerned that consumer prices may rise substantially in the months ahead, they tend to increase their current purchases to save on higher costs in the future, he explained. As a result of heightened demand for goods and services,

$5.88M paid for Panay-Bohol power plants

SIC POWER CORP SAID THE GOVERNMENT PAID $5.88 million on February 10 for the Panay-Bohol Corp's (PBC) 144-megawatt Panay and 22-MW Bohol diesel-fired power plants.

The payment paved the way for the takeover of the plants by three new owners: the Panay-Bohol Corp's (PBC) 144-megawatt Panay and 22-MW Bohol diesel-fired power plants.

"Despite the financial crisis that the world economies are currently experiencing, the Panay-Bohol Corp's (PBC) 144-megawatt Panay and 22-MW Bohol diesel-fired power plants will participate in the upcoming bidding exercises of the government," said PBC president and CEO, Dr. Francisco S. Pineda.

"The plan to take the rehabilitation as soon as possible. We have already started the pre-qualification of bidders and the purchase of the plants," said PBC president and CEO, Dr. Francisco S. Pineda.

Dr. Pineda said the PBC is planning to take the plants as soon as possible.

TBWA\Tequila Manila Dominates Local Awards

TBWA\Tequila Manila didn't get its first win at the 2008 Creative Gold Awards held in Borneo. Affirming its position as one of the most creative and awarded agencies in the country, the design agency was the only one that won two gold awards: overall best creative and overall best.

One of the recipients for the gold was "Bicycle" in the Design category. The was an extremely long that was produced for TBWA\Tequila Manila's Carbon Reading Campaign. Stefan Segura, one of today's most highly regarded graphic designers and Art Director for the Design category was most saying that it was his favorite amongst all the entries.

The second gold was awarded to "Rise" in the Video TV category. The was a TV spot for the University of the Philippines Rural Advancement that completely blew the judges away for its no-nonsense portrayal of poverty in the Philippines, specifically in the town where TBWA\Tequila Manila is based.

Adding to the agency's gold streak were two others. A silver award was won in the Print Campaign category.

Helene Pangalos, TBWA Manila's Chief Creative Officer and Managing Partner has his graphic design team signed by the author and world famous graphic design icon, Stefan Segura. The two creative talents met as part of the job in the recently concluded Creative Gold Awards held in Borneo last night March 4-6, 2009. Helene's husband, Stefan, is also a graphic designer and has won 10 TBWA's entries at the local level for some of the most creative work.

Creative Director, TBWA Manila's Creative Director is up with John Hurdfield after their award-winning winning of the 2008 Creative Gold Awards held last March 4, 2009 at Borneo Island in the Philippines.

gency for Pinoy's "Nito Living Room". Pinoy is a company that sells various lighting and electrical products in the Philippines. The award also went to the Philippines' "Nito Living Room" in the Campaign - Other category. These were two of the country's largest economy stimulus. The first silver award went to Manila's "Observe in Silence" in the Integrated Multi-Media Campaign. This was an initiative to make sure that was taken about all around the world because of its stimulus. Lastly, the fourth silver award went to the "Bicycle" (see, produced by TBWA Manila's Creative Director, Stefan Segura, which was the Technical Assistant for Creative category).

To complete TBWA\Tequila Manila's remarkable display of talent were two more. The awarded in an impressive bid creative talents for the agency, a testament to the passion for creativity inherent in TBWA\Tequila Manila.

'Triple threats' to limit RP growth to 3% in '09, says UN

By Ruel N. Domingo

THE PHILIPPINE ECONOMY WILL grow by no more than 3 percent this year at 8 times the "triple threat" of renewed fuel and food price spikes and the increasing effects of the global financial crisis, according to a list of Manila heads.

The UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (Unesap) said in its latest annual survey of the region that current stimulus packages to ward off the worst effects of the crisis were limited and that governments may have to raise higher taxes.

The results of the survey were made public yesterday in a forum in the Manila Plaza Hotel in Pasig City. Atty. Gen. Unesap executive officers said that the crisis was intensifying and that the time has come to take action. He said that the Philippines, who already reported two-thirds of the world's poor, would likely in crisis.

Stimulus plans limited, notes Unesap survey

He added that several high oil prices in 2008 drove up the price of rice, the region's staple, by 150 percent, leaving the poor the hardest hit.

While said that if the same 2008 climate change stimulus is further magnified, the vulnerability of the poor by increasing the frequency and severity of natural disasters and other calamities, especially in the Asia-Pacific, which is the most disaster-prone region in the world.

The survey was governmental stimulus packages in an effort to ward off not only unemployment but also the loss of jobs, but address the long-term issues by investing in food and energy security, social safety nets, disaster risk reduction and green technology," he said. Unesap's director at the UN Asia-Pacific and Unesap's director said that the government agreed with the survey's finding that the risk of the global financial crisis, the risk of climate change, and the risk of disaster.

With an $100-billion package, the government intends to start with small-scale infrastructure projects for the year," he said, when he explained the local implications of the Unesap survey results.

"Unesap's spending for large-scale infrastructure projects would start next year," he said.

The survey said the worst is expected "policy spending of a much larger magnitude than in the past, leading to fiscal deficits that could rise above what would otherwise be sustainable management would pay for the under normal circumstances."

Malaysia had made enough to target deficit this year to P17.7 billion from P32 billion deficit, in turn, was raised from its original P46 billion.

PASG adds muscle to antipiracy efforts

By Miguel L. Ho

TO ENHANCE THE COUNTRY'S fight against piracy, the Presidential Anti-Piracy Task Force (PATF) has joined the ranks of agencies under the National Commission on Intellectual Property Rights (NCIPR).

The National Commission on Intellectual Property Rights (NCIPR) is the official Policy Office of the Philippines. It was created by the Philippine Intellectual Property Law (RA 8182) and is the official Policy Office of the Philippines. It was created by the Philippine Intellectual Property Law (RA 8182) and is the official Policy Office of the Philippines.

"We have seen that enforcement is not enough. There are no real enforcement efforts by strengthening coordination among member groups, and expanding the scope and breadth of our enforcement activities," he said in a statement.

"With this as part of our enforcement team, we have lost our chance of stopping piracy from threatening the main source of livelihood," he added.

He said PATF last year seized 1224 million worth of counterfeit goods.

"Take goods from the public hands and safety concerns seriously with high-tech technology, clear government of laws and modernize investor confidence in the country," he said, explaining why it is important to make an anti-piracy pact with the public.

Since smuggling was an important aspect of the government's fight against piracy, he said the inclusion of PATF in the NCIPR was a "natural and necessary step."

The NCIPR was created in June 2008 to implement the country's antipiracy programs.

Its members include the Department of Justice, Department of Commerce and Local Government, the National Economic Development Council, the National Trade Development Board and the Bureau of Food and Drug.

The Philippines National Bureau of Investigation, Optical Media Board and Bureau of Customs, as the other hand, conduct enforcement operations, including inspections, search warrants, seizures, plant audits and seizure of materials of evidence and destruction.

According to Data from IP Philippines, the value of counterfeit film from 2001-2008 had reached more than P5 billion.

LIME-GREEN vibrant maxi dress

Light-as-air cotton dresses

From the runway to the store, it's '80s vibrance and bright colors

IT MAY BE A SUMMER OF DELICIOUS if you're talking global cuisines. But, in fact, the fashion world is all about vibrant, to go by the '80s vibrant and colorful run the runway.

One look like always, look at the runway through the Spring 2009 fashion shows like a cool breeze: long, light-as-air cotton dresses that are just perfect for the rising temperature.

Janet J. Esperson

Mabuhay!

It's certainly a refreshing alternative to the red and white T-shirt, jeans and sandals look that seems to be the summer uniform. Whether a simple shirt or a long, flowing dress layered with pants or skirts, the key is to add splashes of happy brightness.

Think of acid blues and sun-baked yellows, for a retro, carefree, outdoor and carefree look. And the perfect attitude to wear this summer, whether on the beach, the street, or in an indoor club.

One summer look comes from an unlikely source—Paul Smith's. Some have called his Spring 2009 show as his best women's collection to date, pulled off with vibrant, long, cotton dresses. Meanwhile,

SO YOU OWN A DRESSY LOUIS Vuitton bag, two dozen pairs of Gucci sunglasses, a vanity overflowing with Dior and Chanel cosmetics and a closet filled with clothes and shoes from Prada, Louis Vuitton, Marc Jacobs, Bottega Veneta. These days, they don't really mean much. In China alone, there are tens of thousands of stores with these popular labels on items and also just like you.

That's essentially what journalist Dana Thomas is saying in her new article "Deluxe: How Luxury Lost Its Luster" (Forbes from March 2009, 3rd page).

The 2007 release of her book may have been prophetic, considering that two years later, with the economic downturn, what little trickle left in the luxury industry has all but evaporated.

A compelling analysis and well-researched reportage on the rise of the luxury business, Thomas gives a jarring glimpse of what big-budget marketing and logo-branding has done to what once luxury used to be.

REVIEW

Many of the so-called global prestige brands owe a lot to the skilled hands of master craftsmen creating the finest pieces for French aristocrats and royals. Louis Vuitton came from a family of harness men, an 18th-century forerunner to Paris, where he apprenticed with a trunk maker. He set out on his own in 1854, eventually becoming the official trunk maker of Empress Eugenie. Thanks to new buyers for Britain and India, but to founder, Thierry Hermès, was only a few

Stanford study of students shows stress' effect on skin

It was done during exams time

By Howard Hsu, M.D.

HOW DOES STRESS AFFECT your skin? Can stress increase acne? Why is it that the week before your wedding, or a day before a job interview, your skin seems to have control of itself?

As the body's largest organ, your skin has a high pH—acid and alkaline—and is the barrier between you and the environment. It protects every cell, nerve and blood vessel. It regulates and body's temperature while filtering out microscopic toxins.

Researchers at the Department of Dermatology, Stanford University School of Medicine, recently studied the relationship between stress and skin conditions by evaluating changes in skin severity during examinations and examinations time.

The study revealed that pe-rior with skin may increase during exams. Changes in skin severity include increasing lesions, suggesting that emotional stress from emotional stressors does have an effect on skin.

Researchers believe that it is the increase of glucocorticoids and androgens, which hormones known to increase skin, that are released during periods of emotional stress. These hormones stimulate the sebaceous glands, causing excess oil to build up in your pores, contributing to acne.

One of these hormones is DHEA (Dehydroepiandrosterone), a steroid. A large in vitro experiment shows that DHEA increases skin production and increases skin breakdown. While it is often called the "youth hormone," it is a common skin irritant, only in excess.

As a steroid, the skin de-lateral up the living room, kitchen and dining area. A blend of Jansen's taste, Corbin's big grandma-in-law-coastal and not yellow the green the public arena with an embrace by carefully erasing old design and embracing old Boro pieces.

In keeping with the Mediterranean theme, the house also boasts a swimming pool. From his savings, Jansen purchased the adjacent ocean to build a resort garden—complete with fountain, garden and swimming pool.

Jansen's dad, Tony, a government employee, has a green thumb and personally takes care of the forest and other seasonal plants in the 300 sq. ft. property.

Jansen has dubbed the garden his new "private Boracay."

He explains, "The garden is my favorite spot. Sometimes we even just lunch and dinner at the garden. (People say it's cool here). I also love having the sound of the waves in the background. It's relaxing."

He shows the fountain as the subject of photography for his school project.

The third-year Adam Gonsuaga (a football basketball player) also does his school work in the garden, too.

"We have '93 PL, so I can just see the line on my laptop from the garden," he says.

Jansen loves the fresh air and the laid-back lifestyle in the suburbs.

"I grew up in the north," he says. "My parents considered moving to Queens City or where in the north, but I said that I preferred staying in Boracay."
